What is the Fuller Center for Housing of Central Indiana?

Inspired by the Architects of Habitat for Humanity, Millard and Linda Fuller, the Fuller Center for Housing of Central Indiana is a 501(C)(3) Indiana non-profit corporation that exists to repair and renovate substandard housing for the purposes of eliminating poverty housing, supporting homeownership, eliminating homelessness and revitalizing Central Indiana's urban neighborhoods. We also build new homes with a house payment usually 1/2 of what occupants were paying for rent of substandard housing. This includes taxes and insurance. Their sweat equity of working on their own home and helping others is their down payment. We offer a hand up, not a handout. We are not a charity.

Who does the Fuller Center for Housing of Central Indiana Serve?

The Fuller Center serves the working poor, a resident population with an area median income of 25% to 50%. Compare that to "affordable housing" in Central Indiana typically provided to recipients with 75% to 120% of area average median income. They can be receiving food stamps and even be receiving disability income, but they cannot have bad credit to qualify.

How does The Fuller Center do this?

With the donation of resources, such as volunteer labor, new donated building materials and dollars, we will build two new houses, finish renovating one house and repair several, all in Fountain Square this summer and fall. The Fuller Center uses the Bible's finance plan of no interest and no profit. We provide housing truly affordable for the working poor.

How Can You Help?

Your generous tax-deductible donation will raise awareness and resources to support the Fuller Center for Housing of Central Indiana's projects and will make our mission a Central Indiana reality. We are a mission trip in your own backyard. You don't need to travel out of state or country to help those in need. Why not start where you live? The Fuller Center for Housing of Central Indiana is a 100% volunteer organization. We have no paid staff, and do not pay for office or warehouse space. Every dollar donated goes entirely to build a house. Not many non-profits can say that.

Fuller's Mission Statement is:

We have been called to this ministry, we didn't just stumble into it. We are unashamedly Christian and enthusiastically ecumenical believing God's love extends to everyone. We are a grass roots ministry, where real work happens on the ground in communities around the world. Every house we build is both a sermon of God's love and His grace.

Prayer and Wish List:

For dollar donations.
For our Fuller families to not lose their jobs.
For in-kind donations of new building materials.
Thanks to God for providing us a way to serve Him.

Volunteers are needed:

- 1) Now to drywall an old house on Churchman Avenue in Fountain Square.
- 2) This spring we will rebuild a home for a family of 10 currently living in a three room house.
- 3) September 3, 2012 (Labor Day) we will build one or two new homes in 5 days in Fountain Square.
